BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE HISTORY OF AUSTRALIAN NATIONAL TOPOGRAPHIC MAPPING AGENCIES

By

DOROTHY F. PRESCOTT

Introduction

This essay includes an explanation of the political background underlying Australia's mapping and surveying arrangements which is pertinent to understanding how to conduct a bibliographical search.

The continent of Australia was settled by the British in 1788 when they founded the colony of New South Wales. Before 1901 the British colonies of New South Wales, Tasmania, Western Australia, South Australia, Victoria, and Queensland existed as separate colonies, each with their own government. In 1901 the Commonwealth of Australia was created by mutual consent of the colonies and Britain. A history of Australian national topographic mapping bodies therefore includes information relating to both the states and commonwealth mapping bodies.

Mapping undertaken during the early nineteenth century was basically focussed on surveys for land grants, roads, civil projects, town sites, ports and coastal surveys. Topographic mapping was low on the list of priorities. The first attempts at topographic mapping were carried out by Thomas Mitchell, Surveyor General of New South Wales in 1834 but the same story of pressures of land settlement occurs for all the states. Essentially then topographic mapping by government is largely the story of the twentieth century.

Scope

This bibliography's core focus is on twentieth century events following unification of the colonies in 1901 into one nation, Australia. The end point is related to the cessation of hard copy map printing and the appearance of digital technology permitting the storage of technical map data in data banks accessible by computer. In subject content there is a blurring of surveying into mapping as the early history of mapping is related to the technical problems facing surveyors in establishing ground control. The trigonometrical survey of New South Wales is used as an example. To this extent the bibliography is selective and readers should seek parallels in searching for literature concerning the other states of Australia. In terms of geographical coverage references have been included to the mapping of both Papua New Guinea and the Australian Antarctic Territories which were carried out by Australian national topographic mapping agencies. Biographical information has not been included, readers are referred to Coulthard-Clarks's Australia's Military Mapmakers Lines' Australia on paper, Lovejoy's Mapmakers of Fortuna : the history of the Army Survey Regiment and McCarthy's Mapmakers of Australia.

The Literature

There is a dearth of writing on the topographic mapping of Australia. Four titles stand out and these are by J. D. Lines, C. D. Coulthard-Clark, B. T. Tyson and Valerie Lovejoy. The most comprehensive of these is Lines' Australia on paper, a substantial work, which ranks with Skelton's History of the Ordnance Survey and Andrews' Paper landscape, to mention only two texts on national mapping. Coulthard-Clark writes on the Royal Australian Survey Corps (RASvyC) in his history Australia's military map-makers : the Royal Australian Survey Corps 1915-96, the emphasis in this text being mainly on the politics, personalities and events. However these two books complement each other very well. A recently released work which was published as this bibliography was completed is Valerie Lovejoy's Mapmakers of Fortuna, a history of the Army Survey Regiment, the largest unit within the Royal Australian Survey Corps, from its origins in 1932 to its demise in 1996. This history examines the role of the Regiment, its place in the Army and its technological achievements and changing character over this period, within 'the broader context of social, economic and technological change'. Trevor Tyson's work The topographical map series of Australia focusses on the maps themselves with many large map extracts of the different series. This title is particularly useful alongside Lines', Coulthard-Clark's and Lovejoy's texts. It should be pointed out, that Tyson's work appeared in a limited edition of 120 copies and is therefore extremely difficult to locate but the other source for actual map extracts may be found in the Contemporary Cartography section of the journal Cartography.

The most important report material is to be found in the National Mapping Council of Australia's publications and those of its sub-committees which cover the period 1948-1986. There is much material here covering a long time span which encompasses the golden period of national topographic mapping.

Selected publications of the Division of National Mapping, the national civilian map maker, have been included in this bibliography in lieu of a formal history although Lines' work fills much of this need. These additional entries for works issued by the Division of National Mapping give some idea of the scope of a national agency's functions over and above that of performing topographic survey although not all functions are represented. Likewise for the Royal Australian Survey Corps, also a national map maker, much of its work has been related to military activities overseas in times of war as well as in peaceful times to neighbouring countries in the form of development assistance. The Royal Australian Survey Corps annual reports and details of Army map catalogues are included as a guide to their map output. There are also references to many articles by military survey personnel.

Professional journal literature devoted to the subject occurs in the Australian Surveyor, (quarterly) from 1928 onwards and prior to that date in the Surveyor, for the period July 1888 to 1927, and in Cartography, (half-yearly) from 1952 onwards. Before this date of 1928 state records and journals should be referred to for the early history of topographic mapping. Most of the literature of this period is more biased towards surveying and the problems of establishing survey control which must underlie topographic mapping. State records do have accounts of early attempts within state boundaries at establishing a trigonometrical network and the annual reports of the New South Wales Lands Department are an example of what might be found if state records are consulted. However this bibliography has concentrated on post 1900 developments and users seeking material before this date should start with reports of the Lands Departments in each state.

Professional literature in the form of conference papers fills a large part of this bibliography. Among the earliest are the Papers from the congresses of the Australian and New Zealand Association for the Advancement of Science, which followed on from the Australasian Association of the same name and prior to that the British Association. Another source was papers of the Conference of Commonwealth Survey Officers organised by the British Ministry of Overseas Development where Commonwealth countries reported on developments in their respective countries. Similarly the United Nations Regional Cartographic Conferences for Asia and the Far East provided useful material.

With respect to Australian developments it is necessary to know that the Institution of Surveyors Australia (ISA) was founded in 1952, this was through the amalgamation of all the previously independent state Institutes of Surveyors some of which had been in existence since the middle 1800s. ISA Congress papers began to appear from 1954 onwards. The early ones did not appear as Proceedings and appear to have been lost as only a very few ever appeared in a form which guaranteed preservation. Some of these have been preserved in The Australian Surveyor. Thus ISA papers are only generally available from 1969 onwards when the papers were bound for the first time and appeared as Proceedings.

The Australian Institute of Cartographers conferences started in 1974 and were held every second year. Occasional joint conferences also occurred between surveyors and cartographers. In 1995 the Australian Institute of Cartographers changed its name to the Mapping Sciences Institute of Australia and papers published after that date at its conferences will be found under the later name.

The Globe, journal of the Australian Map Circle also contains papers delivered by personnel from both national map makers at AMC annual conferences. These date from 1973 onwards and issues appear twice a year.

Acknowledgements

Libraries which have been fruitful sources for locating this material have been the National Library of Australia in Canberra, the State Library of Victoria and the Engineering Branch Library of the University of Melbourne Library. My thanks go to staff at those libraries for their assistance in locating and obtaining copies of early material.

My particular thanks must be to Maura O'Connor and Roxanne Missingham of the National Library, Joanna McLachlan, Land and Information Librarian at the Land Information Centre, Bathurst, in the New South Wales Department of Land and Property Information (later Department of Information Technology & Management) and John Cain and David Jones at the University of Melbourne Map Library, without whose patience and assistance this task would have taken far longer.

I would also like to acknowledge assistance given by personnel of the Australian Surveying and Land Information Group through Peter Holland, General Manager with regard to the work of its predecessor the Division of National Mapping. Likewise my thanks are extended to Colonel Doug Stedman, Director of Strategic Military Geographic Information and Roger Rees, Map Research Officer DSMGI, Department of Defence for help with RASvyC reports.

Scales from 25 000-250 000 by the Division of National Mapping, Army, Department of the Interior and by state Lands departments. –E/CONF.52/L.1

The Australian geodetic survey – an interim report on the utilisation of electronic distance measuring equipment / B. P. Lambert, Director of National Mapping. – In Report of Proceedings, Conference

- of Commonwealth Survey Officers (8th : 1963: Cambridge), 72-75 : 1 map. – Good evidence that sound primary geodetic survey can be carried out by Tellurometer traversing, if frequent Laplace azimuth control is provided.
- Australian geodetic surveys, past, present and future / B. P. Lambert. -- In Australian Surveyor (Sydney: Institution of Surveyors, Australia), June 1977, 28, 6, 331-339. – 13 refs. Includes discussion on likely mapping changes.
- Cartographic activities in Australia from 1 January 1967 to 3rd December 1969 / B. P. Lambert, Division of National Mapping, Department of National Development. – In Proceedings and Technical Papers, United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for Asia and the Far East (6th : 1970 : Tehran), v. 2, 17-24 : 5 figs., 6 col. maps (in pocket). – Pages 17-21 cover topographic mapping. – Also deals with Papua and New Guinea. – Annexure A. National geodetic survey as at 31st Dec. 1969. – Annexure B. National levelling survey as at 31st Dec. 1969. Annexure C. Australia air photographs as at 1st March 1970 (shows Commonwealth and state coverage at 1:80 000 and other scales). Deals with the 1:100 000 and 1:250 000 series..
- A figure of the earth for Australia / B. P. Lambert, Director of National Mapping, Canberra, A.C.T. -- In Australian Surveyor (Sydney: Institution of Surveyors, Australia), Sept. 1962, 19, 178-185 : 11 refs. – Paper given to the 1962 Conference of the Australian and New Zealand Association for the Advancement of Science. -- A provisional figure for Australia is scheduled for 1965.
- Further report on the Australian national geodetic survey / B. P. Lambert, Director of National Mapping. – In Report of Proceedings, Conference of Commonwealth Survey Officers (10th : 1971: Cambridge), 58-62 : 3 tables, 6 maps (some col.). – An update with some comments on future developments. – 8 Annexes. A. National geodetic survey. B. National levelling survey. C. Misclosure of loop of primary geoidal profiles. D. Misclosure of all loops of geoidal profiles. E. Differences in elevations at tide gauges. F. Data form field books. G. Australia – geoid contour maps. H. Papua New Guinea- Preliminary geoid contour maps.
- Geodetic survey and topographical mapping in Australia / B. P. Lambert. -- In Australian Surveyor (Sydney: Institution of Surveyors, Australia), Sept. 1969, 22, 7, 515-528. – Covers early mapping from 1907, modern mapping to mid 1960s including work under the direction of the National Mapping Council and the Division of National Mapping. Indicates future trends.
- The geodetic survey of Australia / B. P. Lambert, Director of National Mapping, Department of National Development. – In Proceedings and Technical Papers, United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for Asia and the Far East (5th : 1967 : Canberra), v. 2, 126-131 : 6 figs. – Annexure. Closure of Trans-Australian traverse (to be read with figure 6) – History from 1912-1966. – E/CONF. 52/L.51.
- Geodetic surveying in Antarctica, 1967-1970 / by B. P. Lambert. – Canberra, [A.C.T.] : Division of National Mapping, Department of National Development, 1971. – 22 leaves : fold. map ; 29 cm. -- Report presented to the 15th General Assembly of the International Union for Geodesy and Geophysics and the International Association of Geodesy, Moscow, 1971. – ISBN 0642956006.
- The geodimeter and its uses / by B. P. Lambert. [Paper given to the Institution of Surveyors, Australia, 3rd Annual Meeting, Perth, Sept. 1956]. -- In Australian Surveyor (Sydney: Institution of Surveyors, Australia), Dec. 1956, 16, 4, 213-229 : 6 ill., 12 figs. – Description and explanation of the use of the equipment in Australia where it has only been in use for three years.
- The impact of satellites on mapping / B. P. Lambert. -- In Australian Surveyor (Sydney: Institution of Surveyors, Australia), Dec. 1973, 25, 4, 303-315 : 2 figs., 3 tables. – 6 refs. – Deals primarily with topographic mapping and begins by reviewing the present status of mapping.

Coastline delineation by aerial photography / J. D. Madden. -- In Australian Surveyor (Sydney: Institution of Surveyors, Australia), June 1978, 29, 2, 76-81 : 2 ill. -- Describes programs undertaken by the Division of National Mapping. The 1:100 000 series a problem.

Manning, John

Accuracy checks on topographic maps / J. Manning. -- In Technical Papers, Australian Survey Congress (25th : 1983 : Melbourne), 163-169 : 2 figs. -- 14 refs. -- Standards are set by the National Mapping Council of Australia. The selection of suitably well defined points becomes critical within the statistical statement of the NMC map accuracy definition.

The AUSLIG laser airborne profiling system / J. Manning, AUSLIG. -- In Technical Papers, Australian Survey Congress (31st : 1989 : Hobart) and in National Surveying Conference (1st : 1989 : Hobart), 1-9. -- 3 refs. -- Vertical control for photogrammetric plotting from aerial photography for 1:50 000 and 1:100 000 provided by airborne profiling techniques. This paper describes airborne laser profiling currently in use by the Australian Land Information Group.

Exploration and Australian cartography in East Antarctica / J. Manning. -- In Cartography (Canberra: Australian Institute of Cartographers), Dec. 1989, 18, 2, 2-14 : 8 ill. (4 col.), 1 col map. -- 29 refs. pp. 13-14. -- Describes techniques used by Australia in making topographic maps, identifies future trends.

From aerial photography to remote sensing – a history of aerial photography and space imagery acquisition in Australia / John Manning, Surveying and Land Information Group, Dandenong. -- In Technical Papers, Australian Cartographic Conference (7th : 1988: Sydney), 300-318 : 2 figs., 5 tables. -- Bibliogr.: 317-8. -- Developed as a mapping tool during WWI. Traces developments.

Obsolescence – the on-going problem for cartographic information systems. Part 1. The impact of revision on the accuracy of the topographic data / John Manning, Division of National Mapping. -- In Technical Papers, Australian Cartographic Conference (6th : 1986 : Melbourne), Session 8, [11-19] : 2 tables. -- 14 refs. -- Identifies accuracy problems due to the increasing use of space imagery for revision purposes and explores the use of combined RMSE approach for 'hard' detail and a classification error matrix as a possible basis for a national standard.

The topographic application of large-format camera space imagery / J. Manning, Division of National Mapping, Melbourne. -- In Technical Papers, Australasian Remote-sensing Conference (4th : 1987 : Adelaide), 1-17 : 8 figs., 1 table. -- 17 refs. Large format camera imagery provides an excellent medium for photogrammetric plotting of most planimetric reef features in the Great Barrier Reef for 1:100 000 digital planimetric data base.

Manning, J. and Evans, M.

Revision of medium scale topographic maps using space imagery / J. Manning and M. Evans., Australian Surveying and Land Information Group. -- In Proceedings, International Society for Photogrammetry and Remote Sensing (16th : 1988 : Kyoto), 13 p. : 5 tables. -- 6 refs. -- It is feasible to plot 1:50 000 and smaller accuracy specifications from SPOT stereoscopic, panchromatic imagery but the ID of features is limited. ID can be improved significantly if multi spectral imagery is used in conjunction with panchromatic SPOT imagery.

Manning, J. and Menzies, R. W.

Vertical control for Australian topographic mapping / J. Manning and R. W. Menzies, Senior Surveyors, AUSLIG. -- In Technical Papers, Australian Survey Congress (30th : 1988 : Sydney), 117-137 : 8 figs. -- 12 refs. -- Reviews historical use of different techniques to provide vertical information for the topographic mapping of the Australian continent.
